

3 types of families who choose to homeschool

- ❖ Those who will homeschool for a few months or a semester due to specific circumstances, a particular situation, or an emergency. They intend to re-enroll the students in the regular education system once their situation is resolved. These families must evaluate whether they truly wish to shoulder the full responsibility that homeschooling entails, or if they can make some form of arrangement or agreement with the institution while their situation is being resolved.
- ❖ Those who will homeschool for a set period (several years or during a specific stage of schooling—elementary, middle, or high school), with the understanding that they might return to the traditional school environment at some point.
- ❖ Those who will homeschool from the moment they make the decision, adopting it as a lifestyle because they wish to leave the traditional system entirely and do not intend to return.
